Easy reading thanks to smooth text scrolling: On a text-heavy Web page, Firefox does a better job than Google Chrome ( Windows, Mac, Android, iOS ) at making vertical scrolling scale to your Windows mouse settings. While the default scroll speed is relatively slow, Firefox has a lot more steps between "not enough" and "way too much." Text-heavy webpages also tend to glide up and down more smoothly in response to your mouse wheel movements, which makes it easier for your eye to track where you are on a page. However, Chrome still scrolls more smoothly on media-heavy pages. Cons Freeze and will not budge in Win7, Win8, and Win10. First Firefox 2.0 beta release. Improved feed support. This page was last edited on 18 June 2018, at 19:35 (UTC). by Anonymous Still The Best Overall Browser [Updated Review]. I have updated by ratings to factor in 5 things. Out of the box, Security, Customizati on, Add-ons and Appearance. The reason I chose these factors is because these are what cater to the average user. The average user isn't going to notice the speed difference nor are they going to care about web standards. They just want a browser that works for their needs and this is what my tests aim to do is find the best browser that suites anyone's needs. Firefox leads the war by offer top customizability, the best add-ons and best Appearance (with different types of themes and personas). It's only average when it comes to security and out of the box solutions. The only downsides to Firefox involves it's out of the box and security solutions even with ways to enhance it some might want a more simpler solution without needing to "add to it". It also can crash from time to time. If you want the best browser that offers balance across the board, you can't do better than Firefox. If you want the best out of the box solution you might want to go with Chrome and if security is the main focus then give Opera a try. Pros: Add upload progress bars without the use of Flash or insane amounts of scripting. Notice how I even create a backup of the original firefox before replacing it. It is always a good idea to do this if you replace programs yourself. This way you won't be likely to remove a binary or script that you won't be able to get back easily.
