The audience erupted in applause and refused to let her leave the stage until she had sung three more songs. On March 31, 1955, the 10-year-old made her network debut on Ozark Jubilee in Springfield, Missouri. Although her five-year contract with the show was broken by a 1957 lawsuit brought by her mother and her manager, [2]. I slowly started to listen to his music beginning with his early stuff. I was wowed by it, probably just as much as any other TEEN was at the time when it first came out. Of course, I loved all sorts of music, even as an 11-year-old in 1986. I was really taken by rockabilly and '50s rock & roll very, very early on. I was listening to a slew of artists, especially my dad's idols like Carl Perkins, Buddy Holly, and my personal favorite, Roy Orbison. I was trying to get in deeper and deeper to help me understand who Pop was as a person through the music that he loved. I got an incredible music education that way and an appreciation for music that stuck with me forever. Over time, my dad's music evolved, and as I got older, so did my understanding of him as an artist. I really focused on his Garden Party era—that period where he was writing his own material. Consequently, I started writing my own material and began getting more introspective in my own right, trying to figure out what it was that I wanted to do with my life. Breaking away from the family stuff and really kinda being my own man, which is basically the lesson he tried to teach. You know, 'You can't please everyone, so you gotta please yourself.' You gotta do what you can to be your own man. Every time I saw him, it was always a pretty special occasion. It wasn't extraordinary things, but we would play tennis for example. Pop taught me how to dive in the deep end of our swimming pool. I know this sounds weird, but he showed me how to wrap a towel around my waist. He didn't know how to tie a tie, but he sure did a good job teaching me how to wrap that towel. Connie Francis, Skeeter Davis, Ricky Nelson, Lesley Gore, Red Foley, Muruga Booker, Loretta Lynn, Patsy Cline. Billboard magazine's Hot Country Singles chart that October. Other major hits included "Wrong Ideas" and "Big Four Poster Bed" (1974); and "Rock on Baby" and "He's My Rock" (both 1975). Brenda Lee at the Granada, Sutton, April 1962. What were some of the projects you worked on during your tenure with Capitol Records?. Lee's popularity faded in the late 1960s as her voice matured, but she continued a successful recording career by returning to her roots as a country singer with a string of hits through the 1970s and 1980s. She is a member of the Rock and Roll, Country Music and Rockabilly Halls of Fame. She is also a Grammy Lifetime Achievement Award recipient. Lee is the only woman to be inducted into both the Rock and Roll and Country Music Halls of Fame. She lives in Nashville, Tennessee. On September 26, 1986 Brenda Lee was installed in the Atlanta Music Hall of Fame 5th Annual Awards Ceremony held at the Raddison Inn, Atlanta, GA. She was named among many other famous recording artists including Riley Puckett, Gid Tanner, Dan Hornsby, Clayton McMichen, and Boots Woodall to name a few. Lee reached the final ballot for induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1990 and 2001 without being inducted, but was voted into the hall for 2002. [7]. It's funny, at the same time I archived the Ozzie and Harriet stuff, I started doing my renditions of my dad's material. My brothers had already done it. However, I wasn't ready to release anything at that time. In Dec. 2011 I drove across the country, catching up with the old musicians, singers, and producers who were involved with my dad's recordings and doing video interviews with them. That went really well. While I was in Nashville I interviewed bass extraordinaire Ray Walker and the now deceased, first tenor Gordon Stoker of the Jordanares, who backed my dad on many of his greatest songs. They actually performed some classic back-up vocals on a few songs like "Sweeter Than You" and "Lonesome Town." What an amazing experience. 2015 was an extremely important—if not somber—anniversary year for my father. Not only did it mark the 75th anniversary of his birth, but also the 30-year anniversary of his passing. I can't believe how fast all the years have flown by, and aside from the spectacular Ronnie Mack and his outstanding birthday tribute to Rick Nelson on May 2, 2015, at Burbank's Pickwick Gardens, it probably would have all come and gone without a whisper. It's a travesty how little was done to celebrate it. That said, for the very special once in a lifetime occasion I put together an intimate, stripped down collection of my favorite Rick Nelson recordings entitled Pop Songs: Tribute to Rick Nelson. With contributions from the legendary Jordanaires, pedal steel by Dave Pearlman, drums by Silas Hite, and production/co-production by Enoch Jensen, this nine-song EP serves as my tribute to his outstanding life and legacy. I really do hope you enjoy it. The EP is only available via digital form. For more information and to take a listen please visit SamsSong.com. Pop Songs: Tribute to Rick Nelson, a lovingly crafted nine-song EP released to coincide with the notable 30th anniversary of the elder Nelson's demise, a milestone that inexplicably received little attention from mainstream media. Containing deep cuts from his father's artistically rewarding years with the Stone Canyon Band as well as one newly written original — "It Rolls Away" — the project was co-produced and pretty much entirely performed by the multi-instrumentalist who bears an uncanny resemblance — both physically and vocally — to the "Garden Party" troubadour. Would you ever record and release one of your dad's songs?. I went to college in Europe for a little while, but I ended up at Boston College, where I ultimately graduated. In fact, I went to high school in Massachusetts, so I spent a lot of time on the East Coast, in a boarding school, actually. I have a degree in Psychology and a minor in Film. Music was not a part of that process, and I did that on purpose. I just didn't want music to become a task. I didn't want to start feeling like my understanding of what I know music to be needed a grade attached to it. So I kept those separate. Psychology is the study of human behavior; it's connected to everything you do in life. Working in business, being in music, writing, and being creative is all a part of that process. It was one of the biggest events ever in the town of about 1,700 people. The remains of Nelson's plane sit in a sparsely visited museum as a reminder of the day the town was thrust into the national spotlight. Lee's father was a farmer's son in Georgia's red-clay belt. "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" premiered on ABC in October 1952 and ran until September 1966. Ironically titled, the series focused mainly on the Nelson family at home, dealing with run-of-the-mill problems. Many of the series' storylines were taken from the Nelsons' real life, which accounted for the surreal banality of the program. Still, television historians consider the "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" the basis for many other, though seemingly unrelated, hit shows.
